Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

This message offers a comment on the settlement between DOJ and Microsoft.

I support the settlement already agreed upon that requires Microsoft to make it easier for users to load other programs and that allows programmers to interface with Windows. That's cool. As a new user of an XP, I appreciate the inter-relationships I have found pre-loaded on my machine; and I am glad that XP seems to have adopted this more-open approach.

I do not support harsher penalties sought that would split out Windows from all of its programs.

Computers are an essential part of our lives, they should be increasingly sophisticated, not made to be difficult and awkward for us to use. Keep Windows together the way it was invented; and let the competition among creative minds continue in all the other ways that we use these technologies.
